Although his intuitions centered on the human and spiritual, Capecia de Vega immediately grasped the power of the heart and the power of the mind. His fundamental concern was to understand the nature of the artistic process and how it influenced the perception of the world. He believed that the artistic process was not just a matter of personal expression, but rather a way to explore the deeper meaning of existence.

The concept of the "capricho" or caprice became central to his work. He saw this form of expression as a way to explore the boundaries of language and thought. For Capecia de Vega, the capricho was a means to articulate the complex interplay between the conscious and the unconscious.

In his "Capricho de la Vida," Capecia de Vega explored the nature of life and death, and the cyclical nature of existence. He saw life as a series of caprices, each one unique and unpredictable. This concept of caprice was not just a philosophical speculation, but a way to grapple with the mysteries of human existence.

Capecia de Vega's work was influential in the development of the "Caprichismo" movement, which sought to express the contradictions and chaos of the world through art. His ideas were taken up by later generations of artists and writers, who saw in his work a way to make sense of the complexities of the human condition.

Thus, Capecia de Vega's work continues to inspire artists and thinkers, providing a rich tapestry of ideas that continue to challenge and illuminate.

As Pope Leo I saw the power of the Roman Church grow and spread, he was determined to maintain its authority and influence. Inspired by the words of St. Augustine, "City of God is not of this world," Pope Leo worked tirelessly to defend the Church against heretics and to strengthen its bonds with the Roman Empire. Despite the challenges he faced, Pope Leo remained steadfast in his commitment to the teachings of the Church and to the defense of its truth.
