

---

Fall 2009 Internship

Are you interested in media and journalism?
Do you think campus media could do a better job of serving students?
Do you wish coverage of student issues and activism was better?
Are you interested in playing a formative role in a growing organization?

Join the effort to improve campus journalism nationwide and apply for an internship with the National Student News Service!

About the National Student News Service

We believe that the media have a duty to serve their communities—and on campus, that means students. We are working to promote and produce news stories that (1) focus on issues of student concern, (2) explore the actions that students are taking on and off campus, and/or (3) promote investigative journalism in the campus media. We produce a weekly news digest, provide ongoing trainings in critical journalism skills, and work with student journalists across the country to build a national network of student newspapers.

About Our Internships

Our interns are primarily responsible for the production of the NSNS Newswire, but our interns are involved in all aspects of what we do. This means monitoring news outlets, writing articles, conducting research projects, and helping to build our organization through networking and outreach. We also offer leadership roles within our organization, and we are interested in matching your individual strengths and interests with our service's many needs.

Some specific leadership opportunities we offer include:

- ∞ Copy Editor
- ∞ Content Editor
- ∞ Recruitment Coordinator
- ∞ Webmaster

Interns do all work over the phone and through Google Docs—you don't have to go anywhere!

Intern Classes and Trainings

Our interns attend weekly classes and trainings via conference call on topics ranging from How to Write A Good Lead, to How to Launch An Investigation, to Journalism's Role In Democracy.

To Apply:

Send cover letter, resume, and a short writing sample (500 words or less) to: info@nsns.org.